

Born Upon the Soil

For generations, Métis people have used petitioning as a means of political expression and to call for the recognition of their rights. Beginning in the Great Lakes and spreading across the Métis homeland, petitioning was a key part of Métis national expression. In Sault Ste. Marie in 1850, Métis heads of family stood firm in what they understood their rights to be.

