

Reunion with Family and Exchange of Gifts

The Great Rendezvous at Fort William meant the return of fur traders, many of them Métis, and the reunion of families from across the North-West after months apart. Fur traders might also bring home small gifts and treasures from their journey to share with their loved ones, like combs, ribbons or beads.