

Collective Action at Mica Bay

When the Crown threatened their way of life, Métis and Anishinaabe allied together. The taking of the Mica Bay Mine forced the Crown to take them seriously, and the Robinson Treaty ensued. The Crown's unfulfilled promise to protect Métis River Lots, made during treaty negotiations, remains an outstanding issue.

