

Hunting for Justice

For over a century, the Crown denied, disregarded, and disrespected the Métis. By the 1980s and 90s, the Métis had endured enough, seeking recognition of their rights through political channels. When these efforts failed, they turned to the courts. In 2003, the Supreme Court of Canada delivered a unanimous ruling in favour of the Powley family, paving the way for full recognition of Métis rights!
